This presentation will offer tools to be understood from a psychosocial approach the situation of reunited minors. Minors who arrived very damaged from their countries of origin protagonists of situations of social and familiar risk.

These minors land to our countries with a load of symptomatology that should be considered in our intervention. We find that they often are advocated to enter in spirals of social exclusion and marginalization in our societies.

Another objective will be discuss about which factors characterize these life histories in order to offer from our professional work new opportunities and horizons.
